I.C.4.5.	Transfers abroad through an intermediary bank
	The bank will additionally charge the transaction account of the payer for the amount of the transfer fee that will be charged by the intermediary bank after the payment is made	At the applicable other bank rate
	The selected type of costs in the payment order (OUR, SHA or BEN) determines the payer of charges related to the transaction: - OUR option means that the payer pays the charges of the payer's bank, any intermediary banks and the recipient's bank. The bank charges the costs of foreign banks to the payer upon receipt of the notice by foreign banks in the amount of the costs. - SHA option means that the payer pays the charges of the payer's bank, while the costs of the recipient's bank and any charges of intermediary banks are paid by the recipient of the payment. Any costs of intermediary banks are deducted from the amount of the payment. - BEN option means that the recipient of the payment pays the charges of the payer's bank, any intermediary banks and the recipient's bank. Costs of the payer's bank and any costs of intermediary banks are deducted from the amount of the payment.
	In the event that the payer does not indicate the party responsible for settling the payment costs in the payment order, the bank uses the SHA option to charge the commission fee.
	In the event of a refund of a processed and announced payment order abroad, upon the request of the client, the bank is entitled to a compensation in the amount of the transfer fee, which means that the paid commission is not refunded.
